

While I applaud the FCC's interest in limiting Telemarketing however I am concerned that the federal government entering into this area could impede and undermine our state's very successful action. Indiana's telephone privacy law has improved my quality time at home with my family in that previously we would receive 10 to 15 calls weekly generally during the precious little time my family is together. Currently we will receive perhaps 1 call per week. At one point in time I was involved with a company that did mass telemarketing in the refinance business. I can tell you from experience that the purpose as stated in most of the Telemarketing calls is not primarily to help me or my family but simply another method of advertising. An advertising method not able to easily be quieted. Please do nothing if there is a possibility that our current working system of protecting family time could be in danger of being changed. Thank You
